RUBY VALLEY.

[Elko Post of December 16th.]

Leaving town about two o'clock in the afternoon, a pleasant ride of about sixteen miles brought us to the ranch of Senator Shepherd. Here we were entertained in a princely manner and furnished with as sumptuous a supper as Chinese imagination could invent. After spending the night in refreshing sleep, we proceeded on our journey. Arriving at Mormon Charlie's ranch at noon. we stopped for dinner, which article was served up to us by "the lady of the" ranch, whose fine appearance One square (ten lines), first insertion. $ 100 and gentle manners would induce the most fastidious to relish what the most fastidious to relish what the most fastidious to relish what fastidious to relish the most fastidious to relish what fastidious the most fastidious to relish what fastidious the reliable to relish what fastidious the reliable the most fastidious to relish what fastidious the reliable the reliable the most fastidious to relish what fastidious the reliable the most fastidious to relish what fastidious the reliable the most fastidious the reliable the we turned into what is called Harri-sments must be paid son's pass, which leads through the mountains into Ruby Valley; but if this road is called a pass through the mountain, we don't know what a per-son would mean who should speak of a pass over the mountain. THE SEASON OF GIFTS.

The Pacific Life very beantifully portrays the good brought out by the holiday season. It says: "As the holidays approach, the good old oustum of giving and receiving presents is paramount in the minds of almost every one. The outtom in this country seems to be universally indulged in. Father is thinking as the day approaches what he shall give mother, and mother thinks what can she give to father that would be most acceptable to him; mother and father hold secret consultation as to the best presents to be given to their children; they hardly know what to do, and the oldest girl is called into the conference and her opinion most generally prevails. She always knows what is best for her young sisters and brothers, but never knows what would anit herself; however S. Proctor Knot proposes that her father and mother have concluded upon her present. For awhile the family lives in a miniature world of mystery, and when Santa Claus does come, and upon the Christmastree hang presents costly, large and

It is a good enstom and well bonored in the observance. It brings families closer to each other, it makes hearts warmer, it binds family ties closer and more firmly, knits heart and soul together. > It is done by emptying the contents of a double barreled shotgun into the sides of a trespassing animal. In one night, Mr. Smith, a farmer living in the valley, shot three horses that were on his ranch, one belonging to Thomas Short, one to William Meyers and one to John Thompson, the tra first being shot dead and the the two first being shot dead and the other very much disabled. Why he should have done this at this time of the year, when there is no standing grain, is more than we can see, unless prompted by malice. Mr. Short entered complaint against Smith before Justice Magure, who issued a warrant for his arrest. After a search for two or three days, Mr. Shoemaker, Deputy Sheriff. ceeded in finding his man. On the 5th of this month Smith was brought to trial before the Justice, found imprisonment in the county jail.

Currentas.-The merchants and dealers of Reno are making grand preparations for the holiday season, and it is not a difficult matter to make a selection from the large and varied stocks of goods which have been spread for examination. At the Post less of price, her large and varied as office store Mr. Jamison makes a tempting display of elegant holiday neous articles. Now is the time to goods, consisting of photograph albums, work-boxes, writing desks, fancy cups and saucers, handsome vases, china and glass sets, children's carriages, etc. S. N. Davidson makes a display of solid jewelry, gold and silver watches, silver and gold plated ware, etc., such as never before delighted the people of Reno, and he offers them for sale at prices which defy competition. Fredrick's jewelry emporium is tempting in every respect; there may be found everything almost that is choice and beauceived in store a large and beautiful tiful in silver-plated ware, everything in sets or single pieces, for useful or decorative purposes. Brookins has an extensive stock of toys suitable for children and has just received a fresh lot of candies, nuts, etc. At Chase's there is also a fine selection of toya and fancy articles. At the stores of Barnett Bros., Grey & Isaacs, and J. Prescott, the laties can find the latest novelties in dry goods and every article usually looked for in such establishments, all at prices as low as any one could desire. Now is a good time to make your selections of Christmas and New Year's presents.
